32 The court has previously taken under submission the Petition for a Writ of Mandate and 33 complaint for Declaratory Relief and Injunction as filed by the Ventura County Deputy Sheriff's 34 Association. On January 23, 2019, the court issued a Temporary Restraining Order in favor of 35 all peace officers. On February 11, 2019 the court issued a preliminary injunction ordering that 36 personnel records relating to incidents or conduct which occurred before January 1, 2019 not be 37 disclosed. The Office of the Ventura County Public Defender was allowed to intervene in the

1 action, and filed a motion to dissolve the injunction based on the trial court ruling in Walnut
2 Creek Police Officers Association v. City of Walnut Creek. That motion was taken under 3 submission on April 30, 2019. The court now rules on that motion, which will have the effect of 4 resolving all issues raised in this action.

5 This court issued its preliminary injunction based on the landscape as it existed in 6 January and February of 2019. At that time, there was widespread concern that the changes in 7 the limitations on access to peace officer records created by SB 1421 could lead to inconsistent
8 rulings from trial courts considering that there are 58 counties in California. Rather than 9 contribute to the potential for confusion, this court elected to defer its ruling in anticipation of an 10 appellate court analysis. There has been no such direction from either the California Supreme 11 Court, or any of the appellate districts. As such, the court rules on the issues submitted to it for 12 decision.

13 The focus of the contentions by the parties to this action is Senate Bill 1421, enacted by 14 the Legislature, and signed into law by Governor Brown, which constitutes a major amendment
15 to Penal Code section 832.7, and which was effective on January 1, 2019.

16 Penal Code section 832.7, both before and after its amendment by SB 1421, establishes a
17 detailed procedure to obtain personnel records of peace officers and custodial officers. Before 18 SB 1421, that detailed procedure was known as a Pitchess motion (as a result of the decision in 19 Pitchess v. Superior Court, 11 Cal.3d 531), which is quite restrictive as to what material may be 20 sought, who may seek to obtain it, the basis for obtaining it, and the procedures for obtaining it.
21 The Pitchess procedure was also the only means of obtaining the records in question. More 22 specifically, these records were not subject to being obtained through a request based on the 23 Public Records Act (Government Code section 6250, et. seq.) The result was that California
24 was one of the most restrictive states in the country when it came to the protection of law 25 enforcement personnel records from public disclosure.

26 All of this changed to a significant degree when the Legislature enacted SB 1421. SB
27 1421 added a new subdivision, subdivision (b), to Penal Code section 832.7. This addition 28 allowed public inspection of personnel records of public safety officers relating to an incident

1 involving a discharge of a firearm at a person by a police or custodial officer, and an incident in 2 which the use of force by a police or custodial officer had resulted in death, or great bodily
3 injury. Also added to the category of records available for public inspection were records
4 relating to sexual assault and officer dishonesty. SB 1421 also did not require use of the Pitchess
5 procedure to obtain these records. SB 1421 also defined “sexual assault” and “member of the 6 public” and stated the scope of what was a “record.” There were other sections as well, but the 7 main thrust was to allow public access to certain categories of records, and without the Pitchess
8 procedures and limitations.

9 As stated previously, the court’s focus on the issue presented to it is that of the 10 retroactivity of SB 1421. The court is not going to discuss or make findings regarding the 11 wisdom of the Legislature in enacting SB 1421. The enactment of SB 1421 is well within the 12 scope of the authority of the Legislature. Courts, especially trial courts, are not super legislatures 13 whose function is to second guess elected representatives.

14 The issue is one of statutory construction. The court in MacIsaac v. Waste Management, 15 134 Cal.App.4th 1076 provides a good summary of the general framework for statutory 16 construction. The first step is the language of the statute itself. The second step is the canons of 17 construction and extrinsic aids to interpretation. The third step is “Reason, Practicality and 18 Common Sense.”

19 Proceeding through these, there is nothing in the plain language of the statute which 20 addresses retroactivity one way or the other.

21 Next, there is the general law on retroactivity. Section 3 of the Penal Code specifically
22 states that no part of the code is retroactive unless expressly so stated. The State Supreme Court
23 looked at the question of retroactivity in great detail in Quarry v. Doe 1, (2012) 53 Cal.4th 945
24 @ 955. In part:

25 “Our decisions have recognized that statutes are ordinarily interpreted as 26 operating prospectively in the absence of a clear indication of a contrary
27 legislative intent. In construing statutes, there is a presumption against retroactive 28 application unless the Legislature plainly has directed otherwise by means of “express language of retroactivity or... other sources [that] provide a clear and unavoidable implication that the Legislature intended retroactive application””.

1 Ambiguous statutory language will not suffice to dispel the presumption against 2 retroactivity; rather “ ‘ a statute that is ambiguous with respect to restorative
3 application is construed...to be...unambiguously prospective.’ ” [Internal citations
4 omitted.]

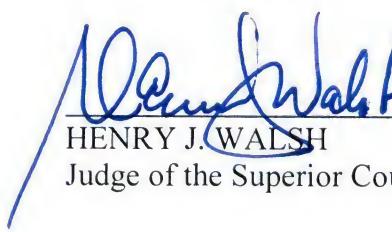

5 Here, the statute does not contain any language indicating that it is to be applied 6 retroactively. The comments of the sponsor of this legislation made outside of the 7 Legislature that she intended the legislation to be retroactive is not controlling, or even 8 relevant. There is no preamble to the statute, and there is no introductory language that is 9 helpful for statutory analysis. County argues that the Legislative history reflects
10 opposition to the bill on the issue of retroactivity. Such opposition, however, does not 11 indicate how the Legislature viewed the statute in the form in which it was enacted, or 12 what its intent was.

13 The last prong of MacIsaac is largely irrelevant at this point. There is clearly public 14 interest in peace officer records, especially as they may relate to misconduct on the job. That 15 interest, however, is not the controlling factor. If that public interest is so pervasive, it needs to 16 be converted into legislative action. Using it to put a strained construction on existing 17 legislation, or to reach a result is not appropriate for this court as a matter of judicial practice.

18 The existing injunction is dissolved. It is the finding of the court that the statute in 19 question is to be applied prospectively only from January 1, 2019. It is not to be applied 20 retroactively to conduct or records relating to conduct occurring before January 1, 2019.

21 Petitioners are determined to be the prevailing party, and are entitled to their statutory 22 costs of suit. Counsel for plaintiff is directed to prepare and to submit a form of Judgment.
